Table Of Contents

Dr. C. Gilkey and Dr. M. Gaffney are ready to tackle yet another day.

Joan Deuber and Chris Beville model the latest in fashion.

Students from the Gary campus take a break (they wouldn't be cutting class, would they?) to take in a game.

14 Consultations

Consultants are used in medicine to assist in the care of a patient. Our consultants provided us with the foundation we need to make us good physicians. Thanks!

24 History Of Present Illness

Our present illness is our dedication to help people in need and the specialties through which we have decided to accomplish this goal.

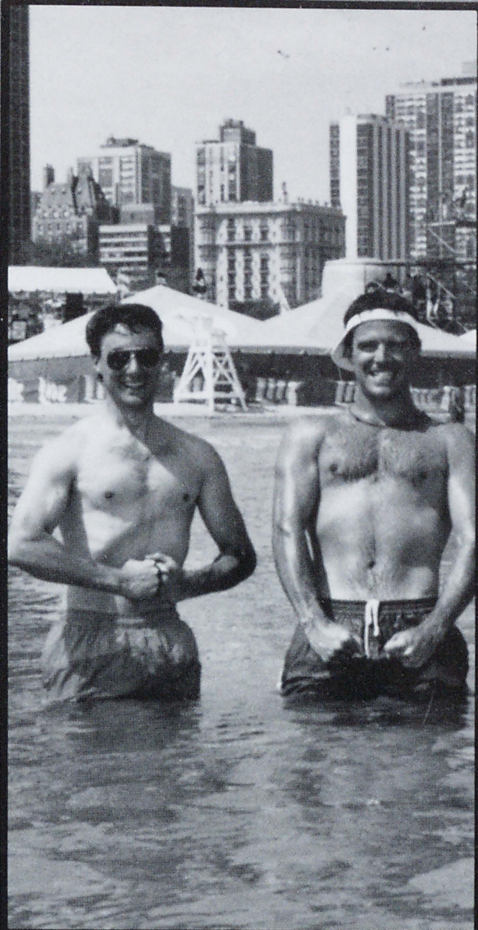

56 Social History

Our social circle involved classmates as we struggled together to learn the basics of medicine. There were good times, and there were bad times. Through it all, though, there were friends.

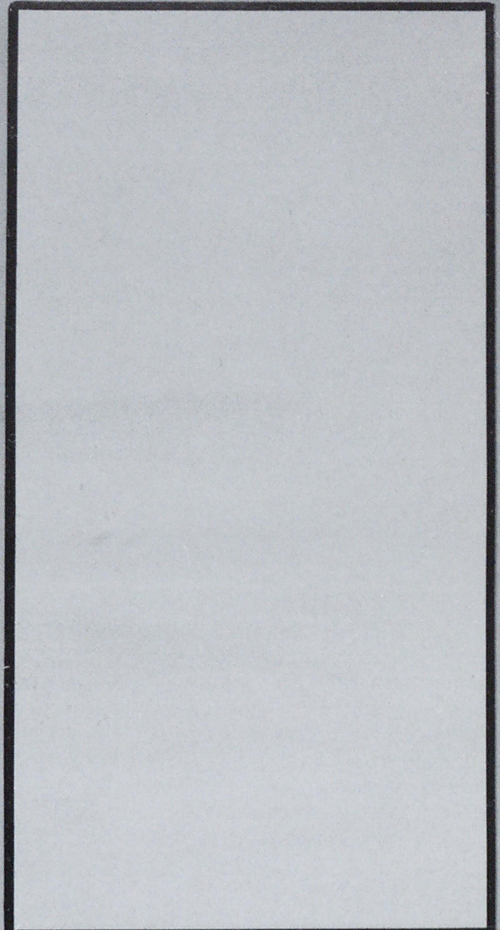

1995 Caduceus

This 14-month-old is sitting on a bench in a far away land. Can you identify him?

Dan Smith and Dave Schlueter remind us what studs they think they are.

76 Family History

Families make us who we are. They are the reason we are where we are. Love, encouragement, support unconditionally. That's what families are for.

102 Hospital Course

Our hospital course was our long, sometimes arduous undergraduate medical education. It was tough experiencing it, but now we can say we're MD's!!

114 Addendum

Addenda are often required to present new pieces of information. Here we present those who have supported us through all of our education. To them we will always be most appreciative.

Class Of 1995

Date Of Admission: August 21, 1991

Date Of Discharge: May 14, 1995

The patient, the Indiana University School of Medicine Class of 1995, was admitted to the Medical Center on August 21, 1991. Each member of the class had a unique background, but all had a common symptom: Each wanted to earn a medical degree. The course of study included classes in the basic sciences to include biochemistry, microbiology, physiology, neurobiology, gross anatomy, pathology, pharmacology, and genetics. The last half of the course of study included clinical training in all of the specialties of medicine. The length of study was generally four years. However, for some members of the class, it was a little longer, for they earned doctorate-level degrees in other fields or took time off to begin a family. By the time of discharge on May 14, 1995, all members of the class had completed the necessary course-work as well as clinical training to earn the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Consultations

Consultants are used to help physicians take care of patients. Our first exposure to a consultant wasn't our third year but actually on our very first day of medical school: Our basic sciences profs.

Many of us dreaded those first two years of seeing consultants and seeing very few patients. What we forget, though, is that without the help of these consultants, we would have never been able to see our own patients. Most of those who actually read this are now thinking, "Yeah, right. Like I'm really gonna need to know the citric acid cycle." Perhaps not in every day practice, but when one does see a patient with an enzyme defect affecting the cycle, it becomes of utmost importance.

There are also fond memories of our initial consultants: Dr. Harris' entrance into the classroom with "G'morning . . . g'morning." and his exit with "Cheers!" Remember that mnemonic that Dr. Bauer told us about? (Dr. Bauer creates apathy. What was that for?). Yeah, we'll remember those days.

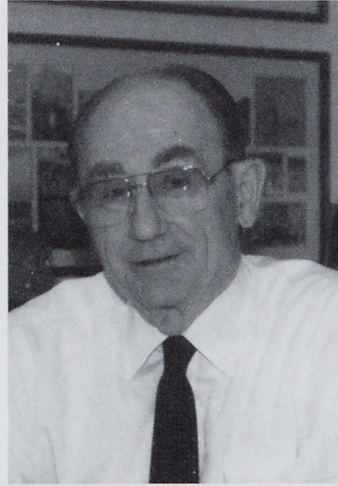

What about our teachers on the clinical side? We were kept very busy with patient care on most services as well as with attending lectures and with our own reading. We picked up skills which we will use for the rest of our careers. The work seemed overwhelming at the time, but it was definitely well-worth the effort.

We are grateful for all that our consultants have done for (to?) us. Our thanks and appreciation are extended to all.

HISTORY OF PRESENT ILLNESS

Our history dates back many years to when we began to think about a career in medicine. Some of us knew as a young child that that was what we wanted to do. Some of us began a career in a different field before deciding to go to medical school. Most of us decided somewhere in between.

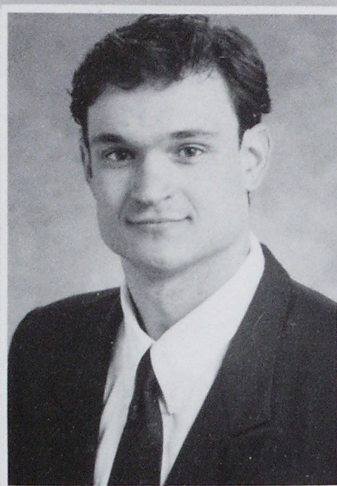

Just as we decided on a medical career at different points in our lives, we all have different motives for going into the field. Some of us intend to do research. Others would like to be a practicing clinician. The one thing that binds us all is our desire to better the world around us.

We have all approached the goal of improving the world in different ways. This is manifested by our residency choices. No matter which field we chose, we each will be doing our best to help those around us so that the world does indeed become a better place.

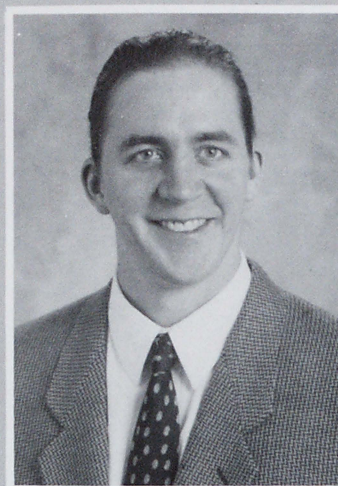

Our history of present illness may date back some time, but the course of our future has yet to be determined.

Social History

Our social situation was rather unique during our "hospital course." Half of us were sent all over the state for the basic sciences years. This allowed for small groups to get to know one another very well — perhaps even too well in some cases.

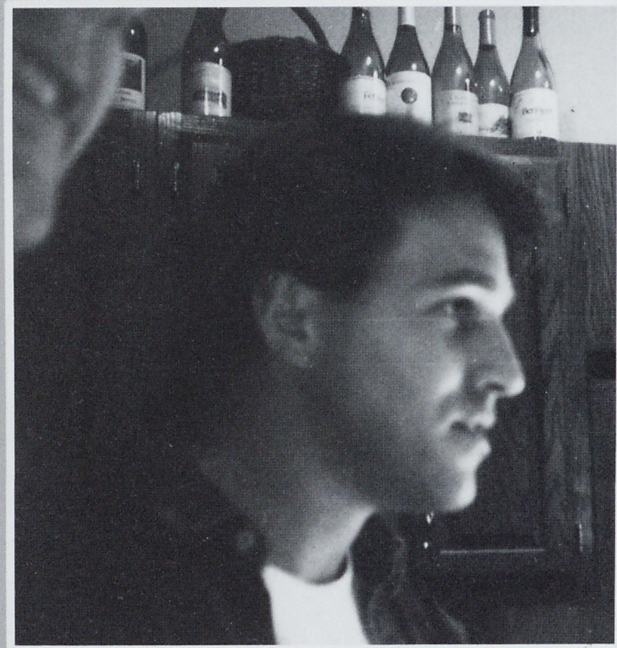

During the clinical years, however, we were brought back together. Our social circles expanded as we got to know one another. We depended on one another for moral support as well as social support; who but our classmates could understand our misery as we worked on unnamed services?

Our social history wasn't only about listening to each other complain, though. Who can forget those late nights downtown or up in Broad Ripple? Our medical colleagues became the people we did things with; who else could understand our unpredictable schedules?

Some of us made the ultimate change in our social lives; many were married during the course of our undergraduate medical education. They were lucky enough to find someone — whether in medicine or not — who understood the demands placed on us.

No matter how we spent our social history, one thing remains certain: We are all a part of the social history of one another, and those memories will last a lifetime.

FAMILY HISTORY

Our family history is significant for making us into who we are. It is because of the influence of our families that we have come to this point in our education on both the social and professional planes.

Families provide the foundation for our personalities. What we've developed with that foundation has given us the determination and drive to succeed at whatever we do.

Many of us have taken that foundation and even begun our own families. What kinds of values will be taught to the next generation? Likely the same ones which have made us the kind and generous people we have become. Will we do to our offspring what our parents have done to us on the following pages? That remains to be seen . . .

HOSPITAL COURSE

We presented to Indiana University School of Medicine with the chief complaint of wanting to earn a medical degree. Our course began with our introduction to the basic sciences. In the first two years of medical school, the course wasn't always smooth; there were a lot of successes as well as a few non-successes.

After making it through the initial part of our hospital course, we hit the high point of medical school — the clinical years. We got our first taste of what it would feel like to be a "real doctor," and we didn't always like it. Though rough at times, it was well-worth it, for we were given the opportunity to take care of people and to make them better.

Our course also involved activities away from the hospital. There were parties. There were boards. Through it all, there were friends.

Who Can Forget The Boards?

One

One: Courney Schwartz and Eric Larson relax before taking their Boards.
Two: A bewildered Chris Wade registers for Boards II.
Three: Jim Hartson and Paula Gosnell show-off their confidence.
Four: Party animals celebrate after Boards.
Five: Mark Lamb studies during a break.
Six: Nisha Ragagopalan and Isha Puri are pleased with their performance.
Seven: ... a different approach to passing Boards.
Eight: Expressions of relief.

Four: More happy people.
Five: Even more happy people.
Six: Was your reaction like David Brandt's?
Seven: A toast to good residencies.
Eight: Celebrating the Match with a golf outing.
Nine: The McNabneys anxiously await the envelope.

Did You Have Fun

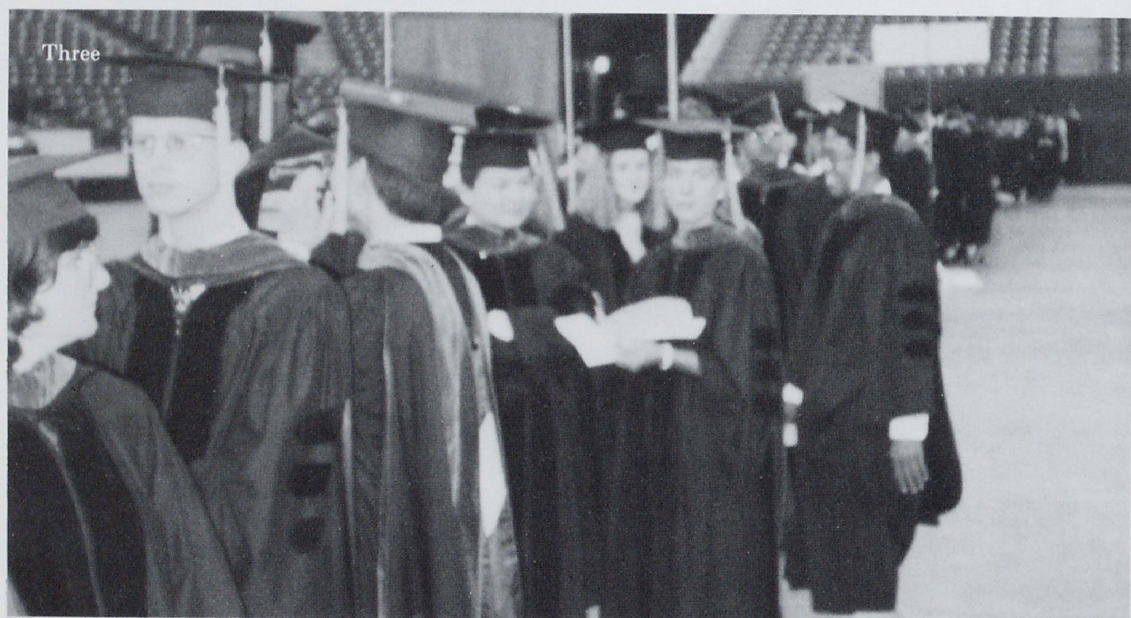

One: Cool flower arrangement.
Two: Theresa Herman and Terry Weaver show everyone
how it's done.
Three: Make-up your own caption.
Four: Having fun at the Banquet.
Five: "Absolutely fabulous," critiques Claudine Seigert.
Six: Ice sculpture. Cool. (get it?)

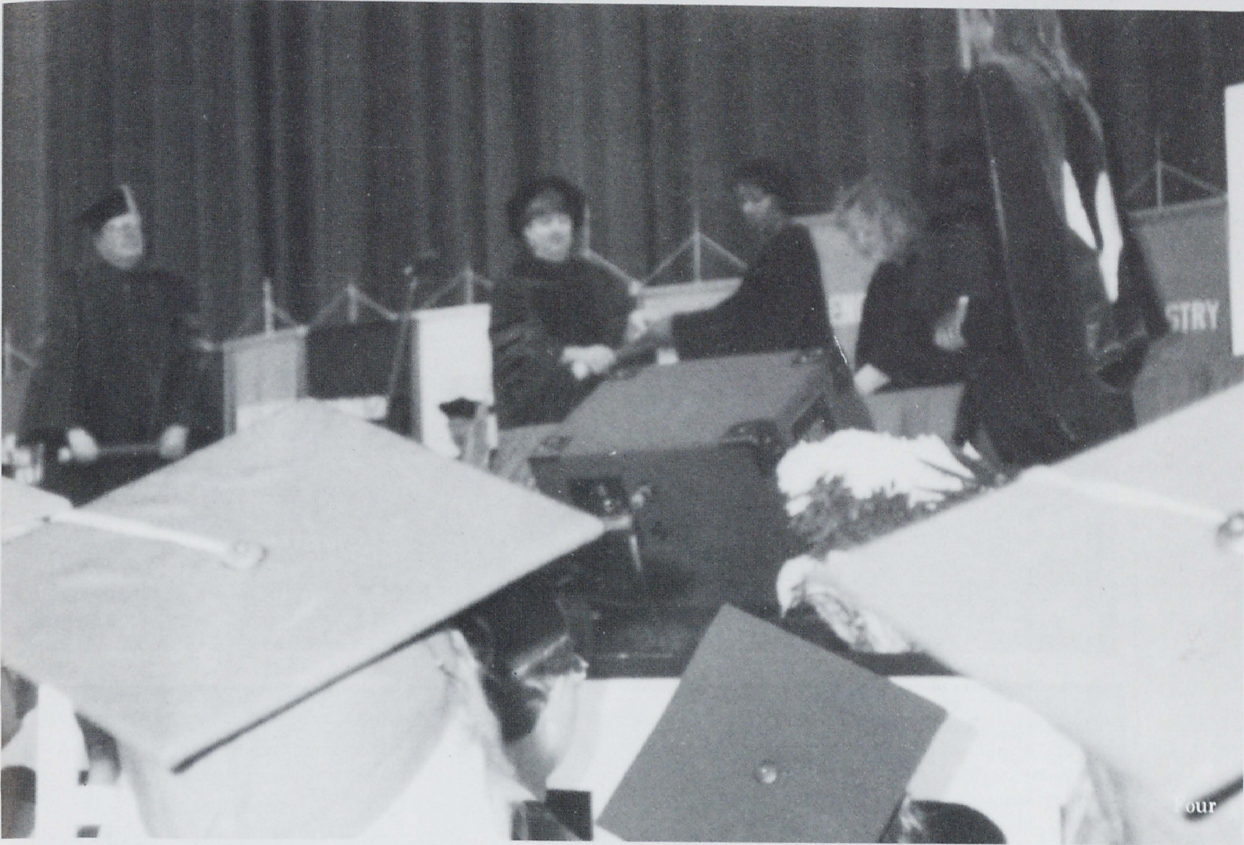

At The Senior Banquet?

Can You Believe The Day

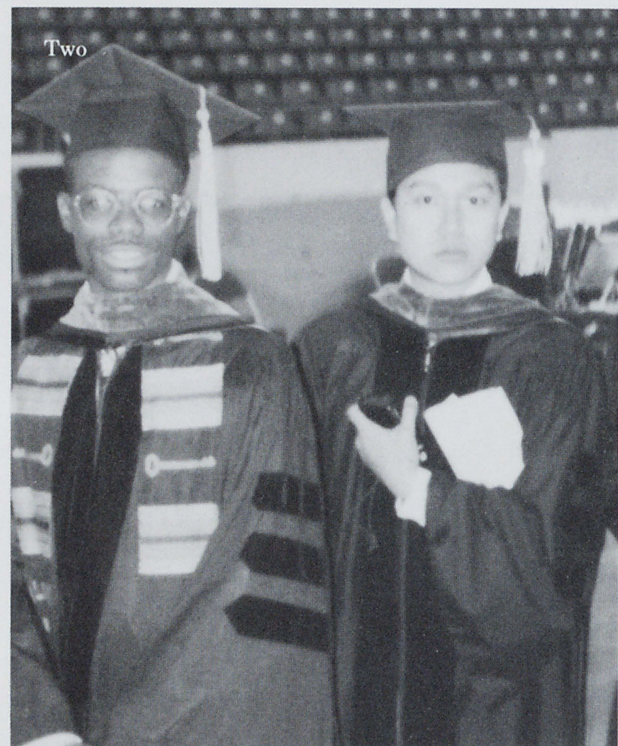

Finally Arrived?

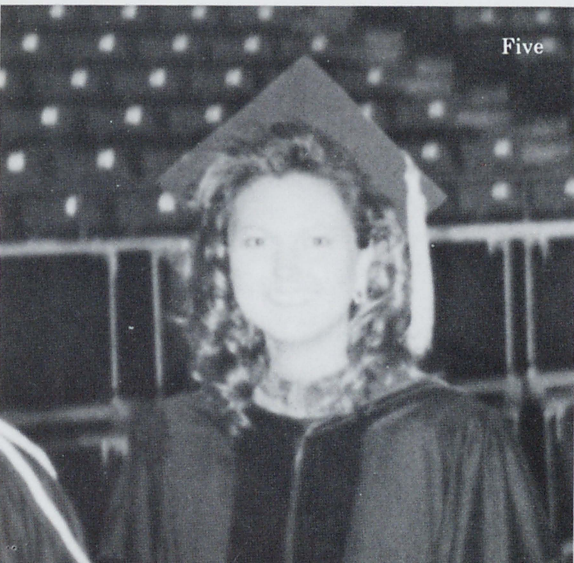

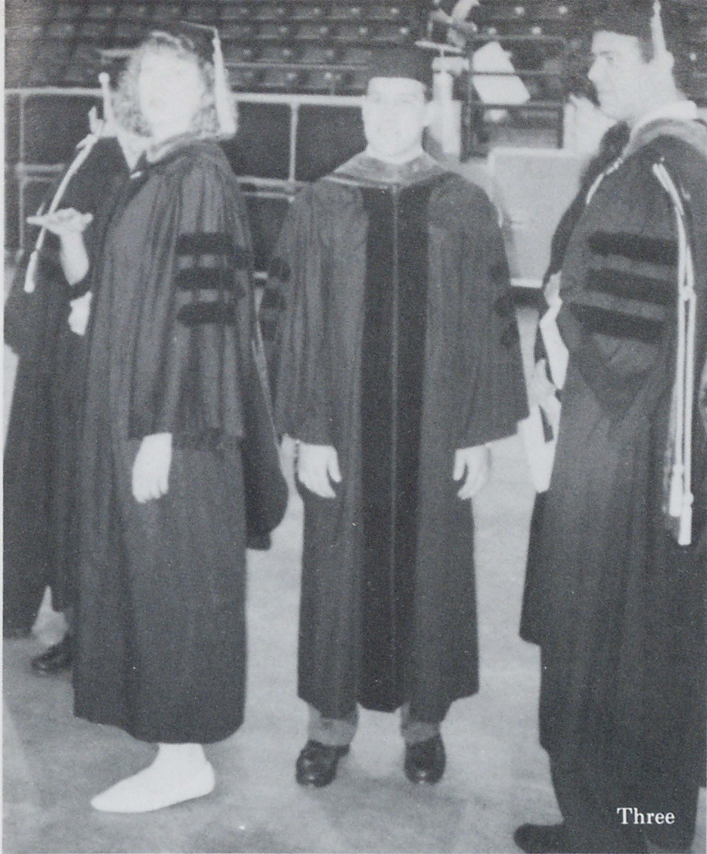

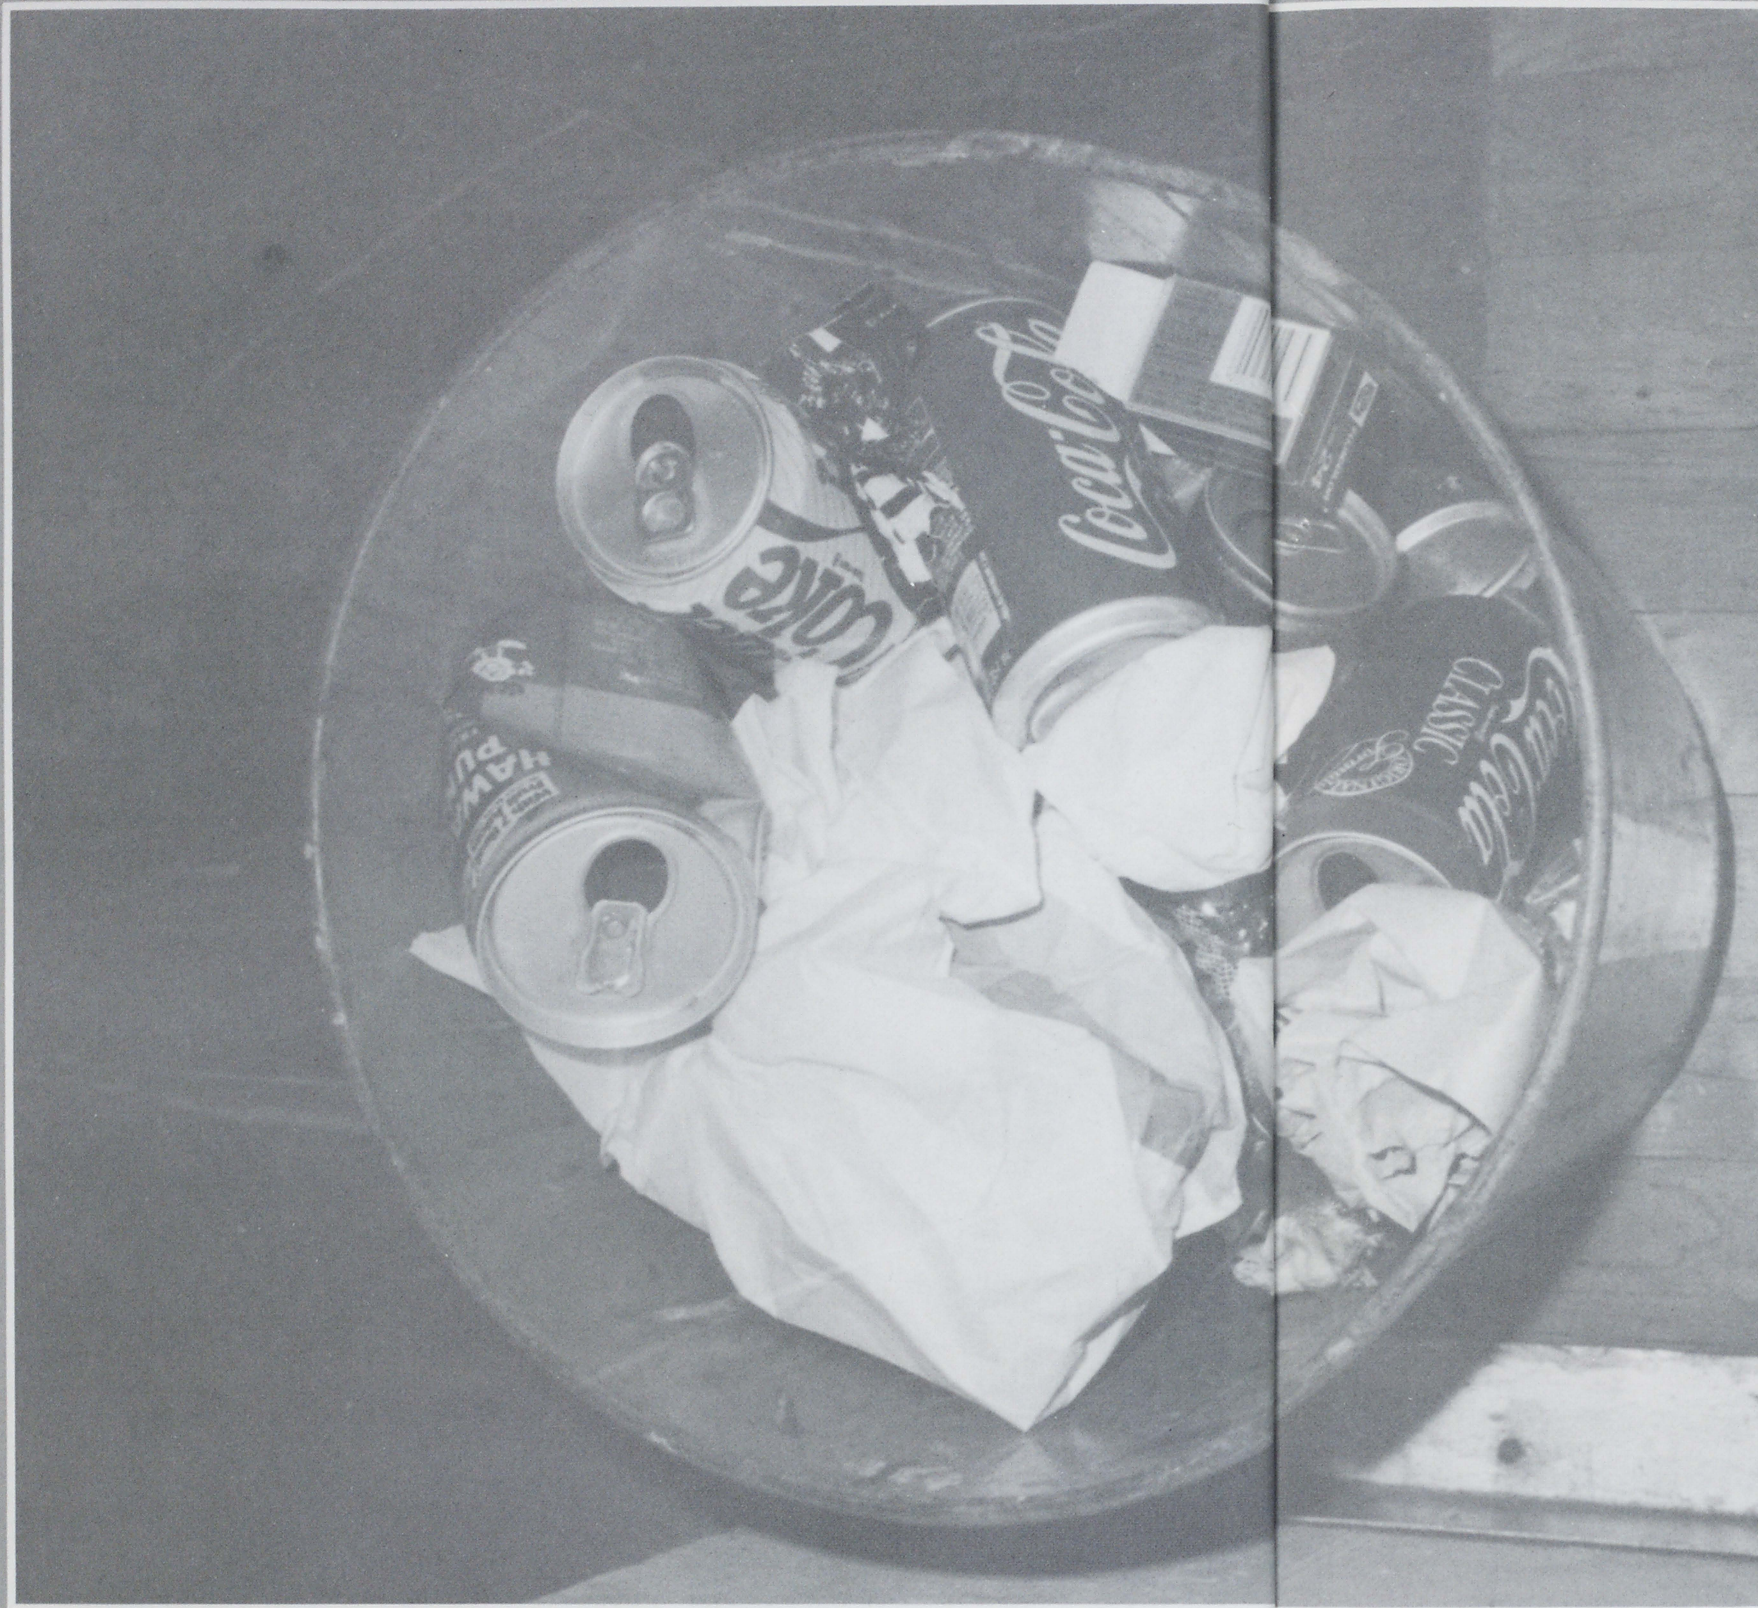

- One: Theresa Herman poses before the Commencement Exercises.
Two: Eagerly waiting to pick-up a diploma.
Three: The final wait before receiving that previous piece of paper.
Four: The conferral of degrees.
Five: Disbelief sweeps over Claudine Seigert.

One: The whole ceremony in one frame.
 Two: A mix of emotions.
 Three: Smiles of happiness . . . and relief.
 Four: Another view of displays of emotion.
 Five: Mary Newman, M.D.

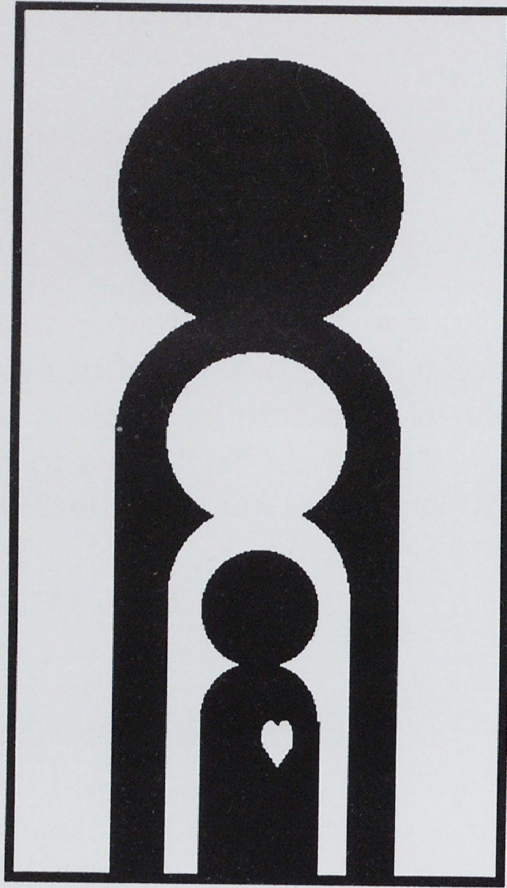

ADDENDUM

Addenda are used to modify things such as a discharge summary. This was the only way we could continue the theme of the yearbook and include something to show our sponsors our appreciation. Should anyone happen to read this, please give me a call — we'll need to talk.

Something To Think About

If we could shrink the earth's population to a village of precisely 100 people, but all the existing nations remained the same, it would look like this:

57 Asians
21 Europeans
14 Western Hemisphere People
8 Africans
70 of the 100 would be non-white and non-Christian
30 would be white and Christian
50% of the entire world's wealth would be in the hands of only
6 people--all 6 would be citizens of the United States
70 would be unable to read
50 would suffer from malnutrition;
80 would live in substandard housing,
1 would have a university education

PHYSICIANS ARE AS IMPORTANT IN OUR HEALTHCARE DECISIONS AS THEY ARE IN YOURS.

Just as every community depends on its physicians for healthcare, so do its hospitals. That's why at Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corporation, we seek to involve physicians in the operational decisions of our local hospitals and healthcare facilities. We've found it to be one of the most effective ways to control medical costs and to improve care. Because no one can better uphold a hospital's commitment to its community than the physicians who care for its citizens. Columbia/HCA Healthcare. A new commitment to healthcare . . . together.
